

Further to the FTSE Russell Index Constituents Deleted for Failing Specific Eligibility Screens notification published on 05 March 2025, the below table has been updated to include Kum Yang (Korea) and Uniflex Technology (Taiwan) which are being deleted from the FTSE Global Equity Index Series (GEIS) at the March 2025 index review for failing the surveillance stock screen.

FTSE Russell Index Constituents Deleted for Failing Specific Eligibility Screens – March 2025 Index Review

11 March 2025

FTSE Russell would like to inform index users that the “FTSE Russell index constituents deleted for failing specific eligibility screens” document has been updated to reflect updates for the March 2025 index review.

The table below lists the index constituents and stocks that have met the market capitalisation and liquidity thresholds for index eligibility for the FTSE Global Equity Index Series (GEIS) and associated indices but have failed the respective eligibility screen noted in the table for the March 2025 index review. Consequently, these stocks will either be deleted from or not added to the respective indices effective from the open on Monday 24 March 2025.
